This course focuses on literature and film from the mid-twentieth century to the present that recounts and critiques acts of injustice from around the world. We will read these works in the context of concurrently developing - and sometimes conflicting - definitions of international human rights like those asserted by the United Nations in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR) (1948).

Who: Professor Marike Janzen
When: Monday from 4:00-6:30PM
Where: Bailey 301
PCS 565 Class #: 25601
PCS 801 Class #: 25672

PCS 565/801: Literature of Human Rights